Dr. Benjamin Weaver and Brooke Weaver Keynoters at Midwestern University AAPP M Practice Management Club

It's been an exciting year for the Podiatric Medical program at Midwestern University (MWU) in Glendale, AZ. "It's been one year since the graduation of our inaugural class of podiatric medical students, nine months since the founding of the MWU American Academy of Podiatric Practice

Management (AAPP M) Student Practice Management Club, and now, on May 7, 2009, our very first keynote address," said Club president Julie Chatigny. Generous grant funding, provided by Dr. Les Appel and Powerstep® to the AAPP M Student Practice Management Clubs, gave the podiatric medical students at MWU the opportunity to learn more about the importance of practice management as part of their overall education. Dr. Benjamin Weaver, secretary of AAPP M, and his wife, Brooke, his office practice manager, completely engaged the first, second, and third year students by sharing some key pearls for planning, establishing, and maintaining a successful practice. The Weavers' enthusiasm was contagious. They shared strategies such as the importance of goal setting and making a plan, keeping a journal of likes and dislikes throughout medical school and residency, and tips on organization to optimize time management, to name just a few.

"We at MWU are truly grateful to the AAPP M, and Dr. Appel, for their dedication to furthering the education, development, and success of podiatric medical students," said Ms. Chatigny. "Dr. Appel's financial support," said Dr. Hal Ornstein, chairman of AAPP M, "has made it possible for leaders of the AAPP M to travel to podiatric medical schools throughout the country to educate our future practitioners, allow students to attend AAPP M practice management meetings and visit successful practices—all of which will make them more successful as podiatrists."
